BACK TO TWO PARTIES

Pennsylvania is back on a strict two-party political system. Only the Democratic and Republican parties are entitled to places on the official ballot in the next election. Twenty-one minority parties sought to qualify for legal recognition this year; but all failed under the Pennsylvania law requiring a party to poll 2 per cent of the total state vote cast for the leading elected candidate and 2 per cent of the largest vote cast in each of the counties for any elected candidate.

In Pennsylvania's case, the multiplicity of minor parties and would-be parties doubtless contributed to the failure of any one of them to poll the requisite vote. It is significant, however, that this is the first time in 25 years that no party or group of electors failed to poll a sufficient vote to win a place on the Pennsylvania ballot with the Republicans and Democrats.

The minor parties' poor showing was not localized to Pennsylvania. It is doubtful that the combined popular vote of all the minor parties will equal the minor party record set by the Socialist, Eugene V. Debs, when he polled about a million votes out of a far more smaller national electorate than today's.

OUR CONQUERING GIRLS

Coming at the height of the Wally furor, the success of the American Peggy Joyce in enlisting the fancy of a moneyed gentleman of London may signify a trend. Our girls are doing themselves proud this year in the field of across-the-seas romance, and this strictly on merit. They are winning not on the strength of enormous wealth, which in times past has beguiled the noble starvoant, but on charm.

To those who are crowding middle life, Miss Joyce has been the basis of a fond delusion—that all of us, perhaps, are doing better than . . . generations have done in staying off the years. By every rule of arithmetic, Peggy becomes no younger, but by any other measure there is nothing to indicate she is one day older than she was in 1912, when a Denver millionaire fell, the first conquest to her allure.

Physicians in Moscow and Tokio have lately said there is no reason in physiology why one should not live far beyond the present allotted span of man. But the objection to doing this has always been the one discovered by that Prince of Troy who made the mistake of asking the gods for eternal life instead of eternal youth. This latter is Peggy's particular gift. If one could hold his 40-me-old years as gracefully as our girls are doing abroad, there would be some point in the attempt to hold off mortality.

Soviet scenarists are jailed for inefficiency, but it must be remembered they are up against terrific competition. Every few days, Stalin himself digs up a plot.

The word "love" in the telegrams is hereafter to be wired free. Can this be all that has stood between diplomats and a world understanding?

The trailer industry has enjoyed a tremendous season. Putting spring fever on wheels was a great idea and there may be millions in it.

RECIPES

Jiffy Puffs

For want of a better name, I am calling this original idea "Jiffy Puffs," since they are made in about two minutes and prove the contention that simple appetizers are best.

Toast bread on one side, and cut rounds from it, or any desired shape. This may be done in advance. Beat one package of cream cheese with the yolk of one egg and a pinch of salt. If you like a whiff of garlic, rub the mixing bowl first with a garlic bud.

Spread the bread on the toasted side with this mixture and butter the other side. Slide a pan of the spreads, cheese side up, under the flame of the broiler and brown delicately. They will puff up and scorch easily so figure about two minutes for the browning time. This makes a generous quantity.

Sandwich Spreads

None of the ready-prepared sandwich spreads compare with the combinations which can be quickly blended in your own kitchen, at little cost. And the best of tinned spreads may be improved and stretched with a few drops of lemon juice, sauce, chopped pickles, olives, egg and so on.

Chop together a few slices of pickle, some anchovy or sardines, a hard-boiled egg, a few stuffed olives, water-cress, or parsley. If there is a slice of crisp breakfast bacon remaining, toss that in. If you are not adding anchovy fillets, use bloater paste.

Moisten your spread with a dash of lemon juice, a drop or two of Worcestershire sauce, French dressing, or a bit of mayonnaise, if preferred. Spread on tiny triangles of toast, or crisp crackers, and your guests will do the rest. Save some of the minced, hard-cooked egg for decorative effect on top of the appetizers. Riced, hard-boiled egg is effective.

Spread Your Treat

Almost unlimited are the variations in sandwich and cracker spreads. Most of the spreads may be blended in advance and stored in closed glass jars or bowls in the refrigerator.

Try cream cheese and chopped sardines, thinned with cream and flavored with a few drops of Worcestershire sauce, as a cracker spread.

Excellent appetizers are the savory anchovy paste and fillets of anchovy, but keep their salty flavor in mind when making canapés and combine with such bland accessories as hard-cooked egg or cucumber slices.

A simple spread is anchovy butter, prepared by creaming butter until very light, gradually working into it anchovy paste or anchovy sauce in any desired proportion, remembering the warning that anchovy is intensely salty. Add a shake of cayenne pepper, or freshly-ground pepper.

Here are some combinations, which may be altered to suit individual tastes: Roquefort cheese and chopped water-cress, blended with mayonnaise; midget sardines marinated with lemon juice; cream cheese and chopped olives; cream cheese and chopped pistachio nuts; orange marmalade and chopped fresh mint leaves; water-cress and cream cheese; sliced jellied tongue on toast, or whole wheat bread; avocado peels, sliced, mixed with creamed butter and lemon juice.

Peanut butter and chopped raisins, blended with mayonnaise, a popular sandwich with the juniors; deviled ham, blended with mayonnaise and mint jelly; cottage cheese, garnished with sliced cucumbers and pimiento strips; thinly sliced American cheese; strawberry or red raspberry jam; peanut butter and minced celery, blended with mayonnaise; orange marmalade with chopped almonds; dried beef, ground with walnut meats, moistened with sauce and mayonnaise; chopped tuna fish and olives; deviled ham and horseradish; mashed sardines, blended with horseradish and lemon juice; ground dates, figs and nut meats, mixed with sweet cream.

Beef Bundles

Dried beef is working its way up. In fact, it is being rushed at parties and accepted in the living room.

When I first saw a small platter of these dainty pink Beef Bundles, I thought they were candy. I had to be urged to take one—and later I was implored to leave them alone.

Combine one package of cream cheese with one heaping teaspoon of prepared horseradish. After blending thoroughly in a bowl with a fork, place a small quantity in a square of the beef, roll the beef and secure with a toothpick. If you like the horseradish flavor, two teaspoons may be used. This is an appetizer which can be prepared in advance.

A variation of this beef bundling is to combine mixed pickle, with one teaspoon mustard and a package of cream cheese. For a more pronounced flavor, use one-third Roquefort to two-thirds cream cheese.

Blend the ingredients thoroughly, shape into marblelike balls, and place one ball in the center of each slice of beef. After fastening these into tiny rolls, serve on lettuce hearts, or garnish with water-cress and stuffed olives.

Stuffed Ham

Thin slices of ham also may be stuffed as a substantial dish for the late supper, or special luncheon. Care must be taken to keep the rolls small, and the filling should not be too moist. A mixed vegetable salad is a welcome filling in a slice of ham.

For a novelty, blend one package of cream cheese, with six stuffed olives, finely chopped, one teaspoon of horseradish and enough cream to bind the mixture together. Spread on thin slices of boiled ham, then roll up like a jelly roll and fasten. This quantity will make 12 rolls.

The Musings of A Native Son---

A Weekly Commentary on Things of Local Interest which will appear each Tuesday in this column.

Sometime ago while looking through some old copies of the Bristol Observer, published some 50 years ago, I found an article written by Capt. Burnet Landreth, which gave the history of the Bloomsdale Ferry. As it is the only authentic history of this old ferry, I thought it might prove interesting to many people, if I gave it in full.

"The first known record of Bloomsdale Ferry occurs in the title deeds of the transfer of this land upon which it stood, when sold to Christian Minnick, in 1770. It thereafter for some years was known as Minnick's Ferry.

"In a modern history of Delaware is to be found a letter from Colonel Thomas Rodney, grand-uncle of the first Mrs. David Landreth, in which he related that on December 25th, 1776, he was an officer present with a portion of the Continental Army drawn from Valley Forge and assembled at Neshaminy Ford. On that day the force was ordered as a diversion to the movement of Washington above Trenton, to cross the Delaware opposite Bordentown and a portion of the troops crossed, but by reason of the floating ice, the artillery and horses could not be taken over, and the infantry had to be recalled. The next night, 26th December, a successful crossing was made at Minnick's Ferry, one mile above Bristol, 3000 men being taken over to Jersey, and moving upon Burlington and Mount Holly, the commanders being Generals Putnam and Cadwallader.

"In 1797 the ferry, with adjacent lands, became the property of Lewis Leopold Notnagle, who named the estate Bloomsdale, probably an Anglicizing of German Bloomsdale. The ferry then became known as the Bloomsdale Ferry.

"In 1804 on the 13th day of July, Colonel Aaron Burr, who killed Colonel Hamilton on the 11th, then on his flight southward, crossed at Bloomsdale Ferry, and proceeded into the Bloomsdale road westward. At that time the Jersey end of the ferry was known as Schuyler's Ferry, it being situated at the end of Schuyler's Road, the land adjacent being owned by Aaron Schuyler, a son of General Philip Schuyler, of New York. An old log structure, a part of the remains of the old ferry house, was standing on the Jersey shore as late as 1860.

"In 1806 Notnagle sold Bloomsdale Ferry to John Mingen, who, in 1808, sold it to Dr. Amos Gregg, of Bristol. He shortly afterward sold it back to Notnagle, who died in 1813.

"In 1815, John Newbold purchased it from Stephen Girard, administrator of Nicholas Barbeino and John Gold-red Wasesmith, executors of Notnagle. Notnagle was a grandson of Johann Bernhardt Notnagle, of Jena, High Forester and son of Ludwig Notnagle, Court Physician.

"Mr. Notnagle introduced the Lombardy popular along the banks of the Delaware and was interested in the breeding of imported sheep. In 1807 he erected the large stone barn now standing at Bloomsdale and repaired the mansion house.

"Bloomsdale Ferry was discontinued in 1840, upon the introduction of a new boat at Bristol. The means of transportation at Bloomsdale was by flat boats or scows capable of carrying two wagons and four horses, the scow being propelled by oars. Flags were used in signalling by some simple code or arrangement.

"The ferry house in stage coach days was a stopping place on the route between Philadelphia and New York, the ferry house being known as the 'Old Stone Tavern'."

Here the story written by Captain Landreth ends, but I would like to furnish some additional information.

Christian Minnick, who purchased the ferry in 1770, was probably the father of Dr. Joseph Minnick, who purchased the Bath Springs property, situated at the western end of the town, in 1807, and built the famous hotel which has since been removed. He also laid out a race track and for the ten years following, the springs were at the zenith of their popularity.

Dr. Amos Gregg, who purchased the ferry in 1806, was a prominent physician in Bristol. He built the property now owned by Pappagian, the Mill street merchant, which was then the largest and finest mansion in the Borough. He was several times elected to the offices of Councilman and Chief Burgess.

Not so long ago, a gentleman from the Eastern States, called to see me. He said his wife was a descendant of John Newbold who purchased the Bloomsdale property in the early part of the last century, and had requested him, while in this vicinity, to stop off and see the old home. It was a disappointment to him, however, to find that the home of John Newbold had been destroyed and that nothing but the cellar walls remained. The visitor gathered a few bricks from the walls and dug up some flowers from the lawn which surrounded the former residence, and took them home to his wife.

The coming of this visitor, made me anxious to know something about the Newbolds. Upon inquiring, I found that the Newbold and Taylor families were friends over in New Jersey.

John Newbold and Anthony Taylor came over to Pennsylvania in their early manhood to make their fortunes. Newbold settled in Delaware County and became a banker and after acquiring considerable wealth, purchased the Bloomsdale property and took up his residence there. Anthony Taylor settled in Bristol Township and he, too, became interested in banking, and like his friend Newbold, also amassed a fortune. John Newbold was elected president of the Farmers' National Bank of Bristol in 1821, and was followed in 1823 by his friend Anthony Taylor. The name of Taylor was associated with the Farmers' National Bank for many years.

KITCHEN WISDOM

There are some signs which Mrs. Housewife should believe. They are the labels which tell her the size and the important contents of the canned goods she is buying.

Read the labels. They are your protection. Don't rush your marketing so that you neglect a moment's examination of the appearance of the cans which your money is buying. Simple signs will tell you whether the cans are sound and fit for use.

The experienced housewife, if questioned on these points would give you this advice:

First, examine the can for puffed or bulged-out ends. If these are found, it is better not to open the can, but return it to your dealer. It might only be an overfilled can, but it might also be a spoiled or fermented can. Therefore, it is safer not to risk opening it.

Those cans on which the ends are flat, or slightly drawn in, are for themselves, and tell you that the contents are perfectly sound and they may be opened without question.

A strong, easily-operated can opener is a valuable and necessary investment. It will save time, temper and many an injury from jagged edges on improperly-opened cans. Another point is that when a jagged opening is made, there is difficulty in emptying the contents, which, if solid, become broken up and no longer present an attractive appearance.

QUAKE-PROOF CITY

SIMLA, India — (INS) — Altogether 8,882 bodies have been recovered from the ruins of Quetta, the city devastated by a terrific earthquake last year. Clearance of the ruins is expected to be complete by the end of next month and the city will soon begin to rise again from its ashes with its new permanent earthquake-proof buildings. It has already assumed something of its old animated appearance, though many of the present houses and shops are only temporary erections.

CHAPTER XXIV

Unaware of all that was going on, Genevieve much enjoyed herself, and so even did the old-fashioned hombody, Jerry's mother. They retired shortly after midnight.

Including Diana, who couldn't possibly have slept, the remainder of the party stayed on in the casino.

Falconer scorned the roulette table with its unlucky red that had repented Diana. He was through with her—and it—and he plunged heavily at blackjack, winning five thousand dollars.

Thereafter, with Dolores as his mascot beside him, he played dice till almost dawn, and was ten thousand to the good.

Regina at his shoulder, Regina slipping endless bills to him, Roger plunged at blackjack and lost again and again.

"Unlucky at cards—you know the rest of it, Roger!" Diana overheard Regina challenge him, her amber eyes full of meaning.

Regina was delighted to be Roger's banker. Probably all his life she would be Roger's banker, thought Diana scornfully.

Diana was "out," and glad of it, she told herself. Surely now she would grow to learn the meaning of the word peace.

She slipped out for a breath of air, and just beyond the entrance to the casino, in the gardens, stopped for a moment at the old "wishing-well."

Its iron bucket, suspended by a chain, dripped peacefully into the moonlit water. On the ornamental top, Panchito, the famous parrot, creaked to her in Spanish: "Hello, sweetheart!"

"With a wish, and if I can it'll come true—I'll make it come true," Diana had the kind voice of Jerry Nolan.

Her tears fell fast. He took her hand. He said: "D'you mind if a stupid fellow like me expresses the wish dearest to his heart?"

She could not speak. He continued.

"To take care of the dearest girl in the world for the rest of her life is what I wish for. D'you know her name? It's Diana Darlington."

The Old Year was ushered out on Sunday night, and celebrations went on far into the morning.

Late on the Monday afternoon, Jerry's party got into the cars, and sped across the Mexican border back to Hollywood, the hectic week-end over.

It was hectic on the roads, too, because for many miles outside the movie capital, they were flooded.

Twice the occupants had to get out in the rain, because the cars stuck in the mud and debris.

Everyone got wet, and Genevieve developed a very bad cold.

Mrs. Holzer, the landlady of their Hollywood bungalow, nursed her in the beginning, since Diana, willy-nilly, had to be on the set for her picture.

"She's that restless and nervous, I can't keep her in her bed." So spoke the harassed landlady to Diana, the beginning of the second week in January.

"My picture will be finished in two more days and then I'll look after myself," said Diana, worried.

On the afternoon on the day on which the picture was completed, Genevieve was taken to the hospital with pneumonia.

She was seriously ill. Diana stayed by her mother. The compassionate authorities permitted her to sleep in the hospital.

The studio informed her that she might have a week's vacation, without pay.

But at the end of the week, the crisis had not yet been reached. Diana, lost to everything but her mother's critical condition, remained at the bedside.

Then the tide turned. . . . "She will recover," said the doctor, "but she will need the greatest care and attention, and I recommend that whenever she's strong enough to move, you get her into a good sanitarium in Southern Arizona."

The money? Diana racked her brains about the necessary money for the expenses of the illness and the long recuperation. . . .

For the studio had dispensed with her services, in a curt notice informing her that by overstaying her "vacation," she had made a breach of contract, therefore her contract was terminated.

Regina was at the Diplomat giving lavish parties, entertaining all the important directors and producers and influential motion picture people she could find.

Regina was taking dramatic lessons from a high-priced tutor, being convinced that she was a potential Duse or Bernhardt, and all that she needed was a little instruction in diction. Then she would make a sensational debut.

It annoyed her that Clarence had got a job immediately at the studios, but of course it was only because of his comic face and figure and his absurd English accent!

Roger was definitely out of the movies, via the route of the grape-vine system that appears to run from studio to studio in Hollywood. (Because he had annoyed Falconer, (so did he explain it), he was black-listed.)

But with Regina madly enamored of him, what did that matter? He had discovered that he loathed to work—that he was meant to be an international playboy—and decided that whenever Regina's queer yen to get into pictures had been squelched (as undoubtedly it would be, since she couldn't act at all), they would be married.

Meantime, they were engaged.

Diana tried several times to get in touch with Regina at the Diplomat, but either Regina was out, or asleep and couldn't be disturbed, or the line was busy.

It became obvious there was little to be hoped for that quarter as to borrowing money to tide Genevieve over her illness.

Quietly, Jerry came to their rescue.

He took charge of all bills, sent Diana and Genevieve to Arrowhead Springs for a two weeks' rest, with a hospital nurse in charge, and thereafter in Jerry's own comfortable trailer, extended on Jerry's couch, after her myself," said Diana, worried.

Love—a warm, human love—came to Genevieve in the famous lung resort.

He was not rich, in the sense that Jerry was wealthy, but he was a good-looking lawyer in the late forties with a comfortable New York practice, and pneumonia brought on by the icy wintry weather in the big metropolis had brought him to southern Arizona, where they met.

"He's a darling, mother! You'll marry him! He'll take such good care of you," said Diana with tears in her eyes.

It was wonderful to see Genevieve strong again, and looking so lovely, these early Spring days.

Genevieve yearned for New York, for her cozy little house, for the faithful Bella, for her old friends.

"Yes, I do care for him, Diana," she said now, quietly. "He's a fine man of a good family. But what of you, my darling?"

The announcement of Roger's marriage to Regina had been published in the Arizona newspapers only that morning!

Did Diana care? Was she hurt? Would Jerry have his innings?

Did Diana mind that her movie career had been such a short one? Diana did not. Almost from the beginning, Diana had realized she had little acting ability.

"Hollywood has excited and interested her at first, but now she had lost interest, and would like to return East."

"Jerry is going to produce his own musical, mother. He wants me to go back with him."

"To New York, darling?" Genevieve's eyes were wide with anticipation.

Diana nodded. She smiled, blushed a little, and gave out the big news. "A week ago I promised Jerry we would be married, Genevieve. I'm so happy about it!"

Jerry's wedding gift to Genevieve was the $20,000 mortgage on her house which he paid off.

All that he possessed was Diana's, he told his pretty bride as he kissed her after the double ceremony in Arizona, for Genevieve's wedding took place jointly with that of her daughter, and they all traveled back to New York together.

The Hollywood house was sold. Mrs. Nolan was to migrate between her beloved home-town of Moorefield, Iowa, and the big metropolis.

"Though I shan't disturb the young couple too much," she beamed to Genevieve, on her first visit to the Park Avenue apartment.

Regina and Roger went to live permanently in Paris, which they declared was their "spiritual home."

"Home is where the heart is," said Jerry, his arm about his young wife as they gazed from the terrace of their apartment over the shining waters of the East River.

"Wherever you are, Jerry, darling, is my home!" Diana told him earnestly.

THE END.

HIGH SCHOOL ELEVEN READY FOR BIG GAME

By "Herm" Corn
Asst. High School Scribe

The annual Turkey Day classic—Bristol High versus Morrisville—will bring together two teams whose intense rivalry matches, in a miniature way, even that of the annual Army and Navy battle. This fray with all its thrills and chills will be fought on the frost-bitten turf of the high school field.

Each year one or the other of the teams are favored, but always this tilt proves to be a tough battle. This year the Bunnies with eight straight wins under their belts are the favorites; but from what head coach Hoffman of Morrisville says, "The stronger the calibre of the team the better game Morrisville will play." This will surely be a honey.

Although Morrisville trampled over a weak Flemington eleven by a score of 23-0, Bristol continued their exceptional record of eight straight victories by running rough-shod over the "Little Quakers" by the overwhelming score of 40-0. This year Bristol is leading the interscholastic scoring of eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Thus the Bulldogs will do battle with the strongest team ever produced from the local institution. Therefore, according to Hoffman, Morrisville will play over its head to survive as the victor of this classic.

Filling the center position for the Bulldogs will be Ed McGinley, a former Bristol High student who had helped Coach Dougherty as a manager. He will be fighting in there to bring Morrisville on top as the winner. This should prove to be interesting to watch during the game.

The Blue and Gold will be the scheduled Swan Song for a number of Bunnies; namely, Phil Carnvale, Frank Mignoni, Tom Proby, Carmen Mignoni, David Hoffman, Sam Braggs, Carmen Guillo, Harry Barouth and Roy Hatcher. This will be the last time that these men will be together as an organized group fighting on the field of battle for Bristol High—and they should go great.

GUN CLUB TURKEY SHOOT WON BY JAMES JACKSON

The Edgely Rod & Gun Club had quite a large crowd of shooters on Sunday, and the committee was well pleased with the sportsmanship the men displayed in vying for the prizes.

Cold weather didn't seem to bother these men one bit as they tried their best to compete with each other to take a turkey home.

Highest scores were attained by: James Jackson, first; Zade Appleton, second; Tullytown; and George Bruden, third, Bristol.

This is the last match the club will hold until Dec. 20th when they will again have some enviable prizes for a Christmas dinner.

RECREATION ELEVEN TO OPPOSE ST. ANN'S HERE

The independent championship of Bucks County will be at stake Thanksgiving Day afternoon on Landreth field when the Bristol Recreation Center team and the St. Ann's Golden Avalanche meet in their annual tilt. The opening kick-off is scheduled to take place at 2:30 o'clock sharp.

The Recs hold the title which was won last season when they nosed out the St. Ann's team, 7-6, in a thrilling affair. "Tommy" Watts scored the winning touchdown and also the extra point for the winners while for the losers "Punkie" Zeffries hurled a long pass to Phil Carnvale in the final minute of play.

According to the season records of the clubs, the Recreation club is a slight favorite. It has tasted but one defeat, won two and tied two. It was rather late in getting started due to the fact that most of their players were with the now defunct Bristol Tornadoes club. St. Ann's is having a rather poor season winning but two and being one out of eight contests.

However, backers of the St. Ann's Club claim that the opposition being met by the Purple and Gold far outshines that met by the Recs. St. Ann's has played Mayfair, Mount Holly, Ditman, Doylestown, Glenside, Driftwood, Cedar Grove and Roebing. The Recs have met Mayfair, Langhorne, Frankford Giants, Ditman, and Tacony.

Both clubs have played Mayfair. St. Ann's being beaten 31-6, and the Recs losing 12-0. Ditman nosed out St. Ann's 3-2, and the Recreation team battled the same club to a scoreless tie on Sunday.

The largest crowd of the season is expected to be on hand to witness the Recs try to retain the county championship, and St. Ann's attempt to wrest the crown which it held for three seasons prior to last year.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry White, 246 Jackson street, spent Sunday visiting Mrs. Louis Schweitzer, Burlington, N. J.

Robert Wistar, 270 Harrison street, spent Saturday and Sunday in Astoria, L. I., visiting Albert Wistar.

BENSALEM OWLS WIN OVER ALUMNI ELEVEN

The Bensalem boys again whipped their Alumni on their home field, Saturday. The Alumni team was exceptionally strong and heavy this year and many people were inclined to believe that the Owl grade would come out on top. However, the varsity boys came out and showed everyone that they were a winning team that just couldn't be stopped.

The first three periods remained scoreless with hard fighting on both sides. The Owl rosters had a bit of scare when Alvin Ridge, the big end or the graduates, intercepted a pass with a clear field ahead. He didn't let far though, when Bob Lange caught up with him. The tackle caused Ridge to twist his knee, putting him out of the game. In the last period, the varsity boys got their winning touchdown with Captain Joe Wilkushing it over from the two-yard line. They failed to make the point. Bill Lange played good ball for the Alumni with his terrific line plunges and several long runs were made by hat previous Bensalem star, Dick Jenkins.

Line-up:	Alumni

Score by periods:
Varsity 0 0 0 6-6

Substitutions: Varsity—Frederick Joerman, Carson; Alumni—Adelman, Vhart, Jesberger, Mortimer, Seltzer.

Officials—Referee: Morgan, Bloomsburg; umpire: Diamanti, Muhlenburg; linesman: Belk, Muhlenburg.

Miss Katharine McNamara, 619 Leaver street, was a Sunday guest of Miss Helen Egan, Philadelphia.

Army and Navy Stars in Classic

The passing prowess of Bill Ingram against the dead-eye tossing of Monk Meyer is expected to feature the Army-Navy tilt at Municipal Stadium in Philadelphia, where the fate of the game will probably be decided in the air lanes. Frank Hartline, at center, is expected to bolster an Army line against the knife-like thrusts of the Navy backfield, particularly the chunky fullback, Sneed Schaefer.

Pleads Guilty To Robbery Attempt At Bank Here

John A. McCarthy, of Parkland, who pleaded guilty to driving while drunk on November 5, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Boyer to serve not less than 30 days or more than one year in the Bucks County Prison.

Violating a parole in Montgomery county, Warren Mills, 19, of Hatboro, pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of larceny and receiving stolen goods.

He was sentenced by Judge Boyer to serve not less than three months or more than three years. He was arrested October 6 and pleaded guilty to stealing batteries from a Southampton garage.

A charter was granted yesterday to the Leutschhorst Country Club, Crofton, after a hearing in Common Pleas Court before Judges Hiram H. Keller and Calvin S. Boyer. The president of the new club is G. Wilhelm Kunze, of 435 West Airdrie street, Phila., who testified in Court that the purpose of the club "is to promote interest in and enable its members to participate in sports and social intercourse, to enable its members to indulge in healthful recreation and to establish and maintain a club house and athletic field for use of its members."

Judge Keller handed down four opinions as follows:

In the matter of the estate of Rudolf Danielzik, late of Telford, in the Orphans' Court, the exceptions to the auditor's report were dismissed and the auditor's report was confirmed.

In the Common Pleas Court in the case of Sherman L. Bernhard against the school district of Durham township, it is ordered, adjudged and decreed that the affidavit of defense raising questions of law, to the amended statement of claim, be and the same is sustained, and judgment is entered in favor of the defendant school district of Durham township, and against the plaintiff, Sherman L. Bernhard, and the Prothonotary is directed to assess damages on said judgment in the amount of the costs.

In the Common Pleas Court in the case of Helen M. Atkinson and Carrie J. Atkinson against Eugene W. Shoemaker and Martha H. Shoemaker, the exceptions to a decree nisi were dismissed, and the adjudication of the Chancellor is confirmed and the defendants, Eugene W. Shoemaker and Martha H. Shoemaker, are directed to pay the costs.

In the Quarter Sessions Court in the case of Commonwealth against Sevelton Wilcox, Richard Skees an Alois Moes, the reasons for a new trial are dismissed and a new trial is refused, and the defendant is directed to appear before this court for sentence.

Judge Boyer handed down four opinions today as follows:

Com. vs. John Fensler, Jr.—certiorari to J. P. certiorari quashed on judgment of the Justice of the Peace affirmed.

Joseph Kosior vs. Savko—Rule to quash alias writ in trespass—rule to quash alias writ discharged.

Louis Senf and Thomas Matthews, the use of Wilson & Stokes Lumbe Co. vs. George Polensky and Suzie Polensky. Demurrer to affidavit of defense. The rule for judgment of reviva made absolute.

Com. vs. William Hewitt—Motion for new trial—Leave granted to file petition to take depositions and motion for new trial continued.

Communist Group Has School in Bucks County

side by side with their colored brethren there.

"Then the American Negro will be able to expand culturally. He will have his land for cultivation, and he will have his homeland."

"The building where the meeting was held was built by the members of the Communist colony in upper Bucks county, who use it. It is constructed of local stone, and in it, from time to time, are held parties and dances as well as the classes, which meet every two weeks.

"John Weaver, who presided at the meeting, formerly lived in Seattle, Wash. Among those who appear from time to time to teach are William Hill of Pittsburgh, and Charles Kenneke, of Philadelphia.

"One of the most active members of the organization in Weisel, who was not at the meeting last night, is Martin Zimmerman, son of a farmer on the Ridge road. He is a member of the Farmers Union, Local 53, of Perkasie, a branch of the United Farmers Protective Association.

"Zimmerman was one of eight national delegates of the U. P. A. sent to Russia last July by the national Communist Party to study Communist collective farm methods. He has made report of his findings to the school, although he is not a teacher here. An article written by Zimmerman on his Russian trip appeared in a communist publication, "Soviet Russia Today."

"Each of the pupils at last night's school, paid 10 cents to cover expenses, and Nabried was brought to the meeting, and then to his home gain, by a Philadelphia paper-ranger."
